

“The unique ensemble of factory buildings, mansions and parkland created by my great-grandfather Lothar and my grandfather Alexander is now open to the public as the ‘Faber-Castell Experience’. Its special charm results from the juxtaposition of the past and future of a family company that became a global player. I wish you an enjoyable time at Faber-Castell in Stein: there’s plenty to experience here.”

EXPERIENCE

FABER-CASTELL CASTLE

A tour through the Faber-Castell Castle brings the link between the spirit of industrial progress and the traditional values of the German aristocracy to life.

The outer façade, with its Roman-styled arches and columns alongside rounded and angular towers, has a medieval appearance. Inside, you cannot fail to be impressed by the varied styles, from the Romantic, Gothic and Renaissance to Empire and Classicism, right through to Art Nouveau. There is also an exhibition on the history of the family and company covering more than 250 years of Faber-Castell.

»OLD LEAD« MUSEUM

»OLD LEAD« MUSEUM

With exquisite attention to detail, the historical rooms of the mine production plant in Stein near Nuremberg have been transformed into a testament to an exciting era in industrial history.

The process of lead mining in the 19th and 20th centuries is brought to life over two floors. The building on the bank of the River Rednitz, which dates back to 1848, is protected as a historical monument. It forms an intricate ensemble of levels and rooms from different eras.

»WOOD-CASED PENCIL« PRODUCTION

»WOOD-CASED PENCIL« PRODUCTION

500,000 wood-cased pencils are produced every day at Faber-Castell in Stein. How is a pencil made? Take a look behind the scenes in the “wood-cased pencil” production plant on a guided tour through the modern factory. You’ll be able to track the individual steps and accompany the lead and coloured pencils on their journey through the milling station, the stamping works, dip coating and the sharpening.
